Carpentry can be a fun and exciting profession to get involved in, however it does not come without risk. We recognize our team members who perform their jobs in a safe and professional manner with yearly safety rewards and bonuses. Here are a few tips that we believe help keep carpenters safe in the field.

Wear your PPE. The longer you work as a carpenter the more likely you are to overlook this small, yet essential step. Wearing the appropriate PPE can protect your eyes from sawdust and other foreign objects. It can protect your head from small falling objects and protect you from falls that could be life changing, or even fatal.

Keep your tools in working order. This doesn't mean charging batteries and physically ensuring they work. This means take the time to switch out blades when they need to be switched. If cords become frayed either change the cord or purchase a new power tool. Maintain your tools because a tool that works properly is significantly safer than one that does not.

Our last tip is to maintain a high level of focus on the job. Most accidents on construction sites happen when a crew member has lost focus. There are many things that can impact your focus, such as: relationships, family life, health issues, etc. As hard as it may be, for your safety and your fellow team members' safety, it is imperative to leave those distractions at the gate entrance. If you need to talk with someone, do that, it is better to do that than bottle up and potentially cause an accident.
